Vote Alice For Ethical Affairs

I am passionate about working for social change both in Cambridge and beyond, and have worked for the past year as one of the CUSU Ethical Affairs Officers.

This year, I have worked to make Ethical Affairs into a platform which collaborates with student campaigns, facilitates work between them, and represents them on a University-wide level.

I believe that working as Ethical Affairs Officer for a second year would further integrate this role within CUSU, building on our accomplishments of the past year in this role.

Student Engagement

Use our platform to encourage more students to get involved with campaigns in the University. For example by coordinating similar University-wide events, such as another University-wide Green Week.

Work with students to hold the University to account over their environmental targets, for example by critically scrutinising the University's carbon neutrality commitments.

Increase collaboration between JCR/MCRs. In particular, work with Green Officers to collaborate with them on overtly political issues such as climate justice, carbon neutrality and divestment.

Support Student Campaigns

Actively support student campaigns such as the Divestment and Demilitarise Campaigns, representing their opinions within CUSU and on wider University committees.

Work alongside the Women's Campaign, supporting their work on Period Poverty both within University and in wider Cambridge.

Engage with students to encourage and support anyone wanting to set up their own campaigns.

Support Local Campaigns

Continue to work on the Living Wage Campaign, encouraging students and locals to work together to combat systemic inequality within Cambridge.

Use the Ethical Affairs role to call the University to account for its actions as a global institution and social leader, it is up to the students to question its ethical, social and environmental practices.

As the current Ethical Affairs Officer, I have experience working with CUSU, organising events, campaigning on current issues within the University and speaking up for students.
I would be able to approach this role with real enthusiasm and previous experience! It would be a privilege to be re-elected as Ethical Affairs Officer.
