FOR AN INCLUSIVE, ACTIVE
+ SUPPORTIVE WOMEN'S CAMPAIGN

2. TRANSPARENCY

- Simplifying feminist theory through teach-ins, online documents and discussion spaces
- Making sure students can easily access information about sexual assault procedure. Compiling data on how the university handles sexual assault in different colleges and making this publicly known.
- Breaking down data about the gender attainment gap
- Working with organizations like the 1752 group that aim to expose misogyny and sexism in higher education

4. SPEAKING UP

- Working to END VIOLENCE ON CAMPUS, deconstructing masculinity in panel discussions/workshops aimed exclusively at men. Having open and honest discussions about consent.
- Reclaim the Night - focus on making this event as inclusive and far-reaching as possible
- Bringing back feminist organising to womcam - organising at least one action per term around a chosen topic, / highlighting the culture of abuse at UK Universities
- Photo campaigns and written testimonials - coordinating year long campaigns about gender parity, experiences of sexism and violence, involving academics and students

1. TAKING UP SPACE

- Establishing support groups and running events that centre the experiences of trans women, survivors and women of colour
- Co-ordinating with groups working to decolonize the curriculum, ensuring that more women and queer academics are included on reading lists
- Maintaining links with intersectional feminist and cultural societies (like FLY)
- Establish a bi-weekly women's campaign reading group
- More creative events that centre the voices of women and non-binary people

3. BRIDGING THE GAP

- Linking the Women's Campaign with organizing work happening in the UK and globally - organizations like Sisters Uncut, Movement for Justice, Action4Trans Health, have a lot to teach us about domestic violence and women's rights outside of a university setting
- Events aimed at tackling gender attainment in STEM subjects
