OWNERSHIP

We're entitled to feel safe and acknowledged in spaces at Cambridge. I will:

- continue work on college harassment policies
- centralise consent workshop procedure and ensure that freshers receive the same quality of information across colleges
- investigate and challenge the lack of gender parity in our reading lists
- facilitate and support ideas for university-wide campaigns

INTERSECTIONALITY

The Women's Campaign exists for ALL women. I will:

- tackle the gender attainment gap from multiple perspectives
- continue the tradition of inviting other liberation campaigns to run forums
- strengthen the Women's Campaign's relationship with Fly
- support cultural societies in any women-oriented events they choose to organise

SOLIDARITY

The total liberation of women at Cambridge requires collective effort. I will:

- build solidarity between JCR women's officers
- create a mentorship network between female academics and undergraduates
- produce and run a survey to find out what's expected of the Women's Campaign
- organise workshops on personal and political identities and the basics of intersectional feminism

CELEBRATION

We've a lot to do but, with many colleges celebrating 40 years of women's undergraduate admission, we've also come a long way. I will:

- set up an online bulletin celebrating the successes of female students and academics
- support public speaking and debating workshops for women and invite inspiring women speakers
- address disengagement and dissatisfaction
